Project RED recently featured in the prestigious poster display at the International Forum on Quality and Safety in Health Care.

The conference, hosted by the BMJ and the Institute for Healthcare Improvement, showcases the most inspirational and innovative projects from around the world, and our team was honoured to be a part of it!

“Our poster was very popular,” explained Project RED executive sponsor Luke Elias.

“People came back multiple times to discuss the approach with us, and there were interested to see how we had tackled the challenges faced by so many hospitals around the world.”

Luke said it was an honour to represent the hospital, and western Sydney, at the event. Having just been nominated for a local WSLHD Quality Award, taking the Project RED concept global was an incredible opportunity.

“We’ve already shared out Project RED approach with many hospitals in NSW, but being able to share our success with clinicians from all around the world was very satisfying.

“It demonstrates that all our hard work and commitment to improving the patient experience has paid off, and staff should be very proud of what we’ve achieved here at Blacktown and Mount Druitt hospitals, Luke said.

Congratulations to our Project RED teams and our conference attendees for flying the red flag in Melbourne!

BYE-BYE B44!

We’d like to say goodbye and good luck to our fabulous B44 team, not that they are going very far. B44 is being refurbished for the BMDH Project stage 2 gastroenterology expansion, so our SAU beds on B44 have moved to B41. Women’s Health on B44 moved to B47.

Thank you to NUM Michelle and all the staff on B44 for your support of Project RED and for the wonderful work you do!
